A Thief In Paris

A thief in Paris planned to steal some paintings from the Louvre. After careful planning, he got past security, stole the paintings and made it safely to his van.

However, he was captured only two blocks away when his van ran out of gas.

When asked how he could mastermind such a crime and then make such an obvious error, he replied, "Monsieur, that is the reason I stole the paintings. I had no Monet to buy Degas to make the Van Gogh." (and you thought I didn't have De Gaulle to send this on to someone else.)

Well, I figure I have nothing Toulouse.

Hallo Joe!

Thank you very much for all. From Monday until today I was in the Alps in Italy. So I had no time to send you an e-mail.

It was a really fantastic programme that you have organized for me. I have seen a lot of very interesting things. Before I visited Ireland I couldn't imagine that it is possible that a foreign police force has such a different system like ours in Bavaria or Germany. So I had sometimes a few problems to understand what you or your colleagues wanted to explain me. But I have learned a lot of things. I hope you hadn't too much work with me. And the few days in Templemore were fantastic, too. Marie Daly had organized a very interesting programme, too. I felt like a VIP. It was very interesting to see how your young Gardas are trained. Thank your very much for the accomodation. The JPA house is really fantastic.

I hope I can come back to Ireland for a visit.

These two weeks I will never forget!

Yours
Christian
